INTRODUCTION

In the current period, it should be understood that the tasks of the state are considered in the specific historical conditions of the development of society in their complex subject and content, as well as in providing its means and methods. This approach makes it possible to explain and understand the diversity of functions, distinguishing the characteristics of each of them and in the future to find things that were previously unknown.

MATERIALS AND METHODS

In fact, the social function of the state has been constantly relevant in the country. In this regard, the President of the country Sh.M. Mirziyoev paid special attention to the priority directions of the development of the social sphere in the action strategy for the five priority directions of the development of the Republic of Uzbekistan in 2017-2021, in which "... consistent increase of the population's employment and real income, social protection of the population and health improving the storage system, increasing the socio-political activity of women, implementing targeted programs for the construction of affordable housing, developing and modernizing road transport, engineering-communication and social infrastructure that ensures the improvement of the living conditions of the population, developing the field of education and science , improving the state policy on youth" put forward such issues.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

Based on these priorities, social protection, forms of its implementation, the role of social protection in material support of citizens, and improvement of its aspects within the framework of the concept of establishing a legal state remain one of the most important issues.

The social function of the state is not only to provide assistance in the form of material money to the socially disadvantaged, but also to ensure the normal functioning of the country's social infrastructure, to implement effective state and community management in this area, and to provide all-round favorable conditions for citizens.

With the development of the state, its social purpose, living standards of the population, socio-economic rights, as well as the limits of the state's intervention in the socio-economic sphere and especially the socio-economic status of some groups of the population are changing. Of course, the development of the social function depends on how the state's social policy is implemented. In fact, at the initial stage of reforms, social protection was implemented for all segments of the population. Monthly salaries, pensions and scholarships were increased, and various benefits and social guarantees were given to the population. However, in the implementation of this system of social protection, specific shortcomings were noticed, and in order to improve it, measures were taken to move from general social protection to targeted social protection. Today, social protection is considered one of the main functions of the state, but this does not deny the activity of other non-state, public organizations in order to support the implementation of this function. After all, the tendency to use the support of non-governmental or public organizations in solving social issues is developing widely in the experience of many countries of the world.

In the implementation of measures of social protection of the population in our country, the state does not lose its main functions, on the contrary, it uses the support of various enterprises and organizations, public associations, charitable funds, citizens' self-government bodies to realize them.

Social policy is considered one of the main directions of the state's internal policy, created to ensure the stability of its social system, and its goals are as follows:

- increase the standard of living of the country's population;
- improvement of economy and culture.

CONCLUSION

In order to more effectively implement the social function, it is necessary to pay attention to the main priorities of social policy, in particular:

- recognition of the responsibility of the state for the social condition of its citizens;
- guarantee free education and medical services to all citizens;
- adjustment of the minimum wage, stipends and allowances to the real cost of living;
- support of family, motherhood and childhood, veterans and people with disabilities.

Thus, the state implements various measures to improve the standard of living of citizens, the direct social function of the state is aimed at ensuring the social security of the individual, ensuring normal living conditions for all members of society, regardless of their direct participation in production.
